Who is Cuyahoga SWCD?

Your Local Leader in Urban Conservation

Cuyahoga Soil & Water Conservation District (SWCD) provides programs and services that support environmental stewardship and adoption of conservation practices among Cuyahoga County residents, businesses, and community leaders.

Established in 1949, Cuyahoga SWCD is a government agency working with communities and individuals to rethink how we protect, restore, and enhance our region's valuable natural resources. From workshops and school programs to stormwater inspections and stream restoration projects, Cuyahoga SWCD is your local leader in urban conservation.

How Does Your Sponsorship Help Us Grow?

Your contributions directly support our mission to foster a healthy and resilient urban environment through soil and water conservation practices in Cuyahoga County. With your aid, we can expand our reach, enhance our educational initiatives, and provide more resources for community-led conservation projects, ensuring a healthier and more resilient urban environment.

Why Sponsor?

Sponsoring Cuyahoga SWCD provides a unique opportunity to make a tangible impact on your community. Your support enables local youth to attend environmental education programs like Camp Canopy, aids teachers in integrating innovative conservation lessons, and offers scholarships for community members to engage in our initiatives.

A portion of each sponsorship goes to support our Conservation Action Grant and Scholarship Fund. These grants support community-led projects like creating gardens, planting trees, and landscaping with native plants. Thanks to sponsors like you, we successfully reached our goal of 75 conservation action grants by our 75th anniversary. Your support ensures the continuation of these impactful community initiatives.
